WEDDINGS PAST AND TO COME

Mary E. Potter, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Potter, and William Henry Hyde, a son of the late J. J. Hyde, of this city, were married in Grace Church, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon It was as simple a wedding as was ever celebrated in the church. The decorations were confined to two large clusters of white lilies, which occupied a place on the altar. There were no paims in the chancel. An interesting feature of the occasion was the concert given by the organist of the church, James Morris Helfenstein, who played, as the guests were being seated, the overfrom "Stradella," Chopin's Second Nocturne, fantasie by Borgial and the "Lohengrin" over-The ushers were Alonzo M. Potter, brother of the bride; John Lambert, jr., of Phila-delphia; Benoni Lockwood, jr., Henry Sedgwick and Samuel Sherwood. Sargent Kendall attended the bridegroom as best man. The bride was attended by her twin sister, Miss Sarah L. THE EVILS OF MR CARLISLE'S PLAN. DANGER OF ITS BEING FORCED THROUGH CON-GRESS-MR. STOKES'S FINANCIAL REMEDY.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: Mr. Carlisle's monstrously ingenious cur-rency plan combines the objectionable features of a National banking trust and an assessment insurance company. The terrible danger is that it may be forced through Congress by political methods and the pica of Treasury necessities, and without sufficient intelligent and thorough discus-If, as in the English Parliament, the head of our Treasury Department had a seat in the National Legislature, and were obliged, rising in his place and in fair and real debate, to answer the would soon be out of office. If in a time of peace we establish a permanent system of credit money such as that proposed by the Secretary of the Treasury, it may temporarily benefit some banks and speculators, and facilitate some reorganization schemes and enable promoters to dispose of their holdings, but it will make it impossible for this country to attain the permanent position which our population and developed resources entitle us to assume in the near future. It is perhaps too much to expect that all who take part in the legislation upon our currency should be great economists or learned historians. But it may reasonably be expected that they should know the difference between bullion and billion, and at least be acquainted with past American monetary experiments. I see that the debate on the new currency bill in the House of Representatives is to be adjourned over Thursday of this week, for the reception of the statue of Daniel Webster, etc. At that grand function it would be most appropriate to read Webster's words of warning as follows: "I am certainly of opinion that gold and silver, at rates fixed by Congress, constitute the legal standard of values in this country, and that neither Congress nor any State has authority to establish any other standard or to displace this standard." ever expressed his appreciation of the real use of redit more strongly than he. But Daniel Webster opposed legal-tender credit money.

are soon to have a great colebration of the As our Society of Colonial Wars has done me the honor to appoint me on the committee for the nethonor to appoint me on the committee for the nethonoral I call to mind, among other things, that this first great outside adventure of the American colonies was the cause of our first large experiment in credit currency. It led Massachusetts to issue 12.36,000 of credit money, which soon fell to 9 per cent of its nominal value, and the State was saved from financial ruin only by the English ransom of Louisbourg from the colonies and by the wisdom of Governor Hutchinson, who secured for his State payment from England, mostly in silver dollars, so that Massachusetts became known as the "Silver Colony," while the neighboring colonies kept their depreciated currency, and lost their trade, which was transferred to Massachusetts. Newport then rapidly declined in importance, while the supremacy of Salem and Hoston was established.

If our people could only grasp the situation they would see that we have the greatest opportunity ever offered to any country to control the finances of the world. It is not by locking up and permanently maintaining 30 per sent of our pernicious greenbacks to promote the issue of three times as large an amount of paper currency, the volume of which would be more than eight times as great as the gold on which it would be hazed thusily it is not thus that we can solve our currency question and the world's gold and silver question. But we can solve these problems by John-metallism, a plan by which gold and silver fogether, at ratios always based on their relative market values, may be made the metallic basis of a sound, honest, self-regulating and permanent currency without frequent reconingrs, and without danger of one metal driving out the other.

THE PROBLEM OF THE CURRENCY A SCHEME FOR THE BASIS OF PAPER MONEY ON GOLD AND SILVER ALIKE. To the Editor of The Tribune

Sir. The system that should control and regulate the supply and distribution of currency for the people of the United States has never received that studied consideration, free from partisan bias, which a question of such profound importance which a question of such protound importance deserves; hence the bases of our monetary affairs have always been unstable and changing, and transition of expedients has been the most prominent feature in the past. We are now "face to face" with a dilemma, seemingly even more difficult than those which preceded it. But our difficulties are not sreater, relatively, than those which have occurred at former periods. Now if we simplify the matter and examine it upon its real merits, as a financial and economical question, leaving out all prejudice arising from partisanship and sectionalism, and the narrow-minded and sohence the bases of our monetary phistical arguments that naturally spring from such points of view, we shall find the

We should first place in the Government treasmry box a sum of these metals respectively that ury box a sum of these metals respectively that will approximate the product of each—say, $500,000,000 in gold, and an equal sum in silver. This supply should be completed by purchase, through the issue and sale of bonds. With $1,000,000,000 in gold and silver in hand, double that sum in paper currency should be issued. This would make a sum approximately equal to $20 per capita for the present population. The Secretary of the Treasury should be empowered and directed to sell these bonds whenever necessary to maintain a like ratio of the sum of the coin and bullion in the Treasury to the sum of currency issues provided for, and should also be directed to prevent the impairment of reduction of the supply of either metal to a greater extent than 10 per centum of the sum fixed in the above stipulation, or of the increased sum that may hereafter be fixed by Congress. On the contrary, he should use due dilligence to maintain completely and fully the supply of gold and silver as above provided.

The banks of each State and Territory shall be entitled to receive a fair pro rata of the paper currency thus issued, and duly organized banks shall be supplied with such currency upon deposit of United States bonds, or upon payment therefor in gold or silver. The Treasurer shall be empowered and directed to issue two kinds of currency notes, to be known as "treasury" notes, and as "National bank" notes, respectively, and these shall be of such denominations as experience has proven to be most convenient. Both kinds of notes shall be alike redeemable. Those of the denomination of $5 and of less shall be redeemed, either in gold or silver to given coin, at the option of the Treasurer to protect the public funds from ruthless radis by unscruptions individuals or syndicates.

as fixed by Congress, the "treasury notes" of the United States.

Thus we can establish and maintain the parity of gôld and silver upon a basis both equitable and equable, which basis will be determined upon facts brought forward by the combined experience and intelligence of the great commercial nations of the world. Thus we can maintain a fair and just ratio of currency to population, and such currency will be as sure and stable as the Government we uphold, and as flexible as it is stable.

New-York, Dec. 17, 1894.

Sir: The statement was made in your issue of the 3th inst., and has been copied by various papers in the Central States, that "the only lineal descendant of John Knox, the Scotch reformer, is a member of the congregation of the Holy Grees at Notre Dame." This statement is entirely incorrect, for there are hundreds, if not thousands, of lineal descendants of Knox in the United States, Scotland. Ireland and eisewhere. I know that some people named Know claim to be descended from the reformer, but the fact that they bear that illustrious surname is no argument in support of this claim, for the two sons of Knox died without issue, and consequently there are no descendants of his in the male line. By his second wife he had three daughters, and from one of these (who became the wife of the celebrated John Weish, minister of Ayr. Seotiana) most of the axisting descendants of Knox trace their descent. Her son, Josias Weish, crossed over into Ulster and became minister of Temple-patrick. He was the father of John Weish, minister of Irongray, Scotland, whose son Andrew (great-grandson of John Knox) was minister of Ardstraw, County Tyrone, about the middle of the last century. From Andrew are descended the Rev. Dr. Rodgers, of Londonderry, and many others in Ulster. Among the descendants of John Weish, of Ayr, may be mentioned Jane Weish Carlyle (wife of the Chelsea Sage), the present Earl of Aberdeen, the Rev. Dr. Witherspoon of Louisville, Ky., etc. Lord Aberdeen's descent from Knox is traced in a character sketch of the Earl which appeared a few months ago in the "Review of Reviews."

BEARING ON THE PROPOSED ADMINISTRA-TION CURRENCY SYSTEM. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: Macleod's favorite theory is that "Credit is as good as money." He says: "If a bank can maintain in circulation a quantity of credit in excess of the cash it holds, that is, for all practical purposes, an augmentation of the capital of the country." And he expresses great admiration for a system of banking based on the use of only 5 per cent of specie. His credit theory has found a happy illustration in Newfoundland, where there is to-day general bankruptcy, because they have little specie, although they have much fish and plenty of notes appreciated by those was favor the Asiministration-Baltimore-Canadian system of currency (which may be called for short, the A. It is unreasonable to give a creditor the right to choose whether he will be paid in gold or silver, at a ratio different from the market ratio. It is unreasonable to give a destor the right to choose whether he will pay in gold or in silver at a ratio different from the market ratio. But to say that all payments for contracts made after a certain fixed date shall be payable half in one precious metal and half in the other precious metal at the market ratio is just, and this is joint-metallism. ERASTUS FLAVIUS BEADLE.

Erastus Flavius Beadle, the senior member of the publishing house of Beadle & Adams, died at his home in Cooperstown, N. V., Tuesday night. Mr. Beadle was seventy-three years old, and was born in Otsego County, Before establishing his publishing business in 1564, he was a stereotyper 'n Buffalo. The stirring occurrences of the War of the Rebellion suggested to the fertile mind of Mr. Beadle the possibility of making money by publishing the history of famous individuals and of famous battles in cheap novel form. He was sucessful, and to-day there are few of the youth of cessful, and to-day there are rew of the youth of this country who are not familiar with the "Beadle Haif-Dome Library." Mr. Beadle used to live in Brooklyn, although he has always had a country home in Cooperstown. He ram for Congress from Orsego County in 1822, but was defeated by his Democratic opponent. Mr. Beadle was a quiet man of domestic tastes. He leaves two sons. His wife died some Years are

She was a guileless, innocent thing, and as she passed a sign which read "Gloves Cleaned and Repatred," she thought of something all of a sunden and went into the shop.

"I believe you clean and renair gloves here, don't you?" she said to the clerk.

"Yes, miss," he replied.

"Well, I have one at home that I'll send down to you. It doesn't need cleaning very tauch, but I want it repatred. I've lost the mate to it."

Then she retired and the clerk is waiting and wondering how he will get square with that sign. From The Detriot Free Press.
